

Student Name: _____

Class: _____

Due Date: _____

Introduction to Relative Clauses

Definition: Relative clauses are a type of subordinate clause that provides more information about a person, place, or thing.

Function: Relative clauses are introduced by a relative pronoun, such as who, which, or that.

Usage: Relative clauses can be used to add variety and interest to writing and speech.

Exercise 1: Identifying Relative Clauses

1. Read the following sentences and identify the relative clause in each one:

- The book, which is on the table, is mine.
- The city, where I was born, is very beautiful.
- The teacher, who is teaching us math, is very patient.

Constructing Relative Clauses

Complete the following sentences with the correct relative pronoun:

1. The person _____ is standing over there is my friend.
2. The book _____ is on the bestseller list is very popular.
3. The city _____ is located on the coast is a popular tourist destination.

Example Sentences:

- The person who is standing over there is my friend.
- The book that is on the bestseller list is very popular.
- The city which is located on the coast is a popular tourist destination.

Read the following passage and identify the relative clauses:

"The city, which is located on the coast, is a popular tourist destination. The hotel, where we stayed, was very comfortable. The staff, who were very friendly, made our stay very enjoyable."

Exercise 2: Creating Relative Clauses

1. Create your own relative clauses to describe the following:
 - A person you admire
 - A place you have visited
 - A thing you own

Restrictive and Non-Restrictive Relative Clauses

Definition: Restrictive relative clauses provide essential information about the person, place, or thing, while non-restrictive relative clauses provide additional information that is not essential.

Example: "The book that is on the table is mine." (Restrictive) vs. "The city, which is located on the coast, is a popular tourist destination." (Non-Restrictive)

Exercise 3: Identifying Restrictive and Non-Restrictive Relative Clauses

1. Read the following sentences and identify whether the relative clause is restrictive or non-restrictive:
 - The book that is on the table is mine. (Restrictive/Non-Restrictive)
 - The city, which is located on the coast, is a popular tourist destination. (Restrictive/Non-Restrictive)
 - The teacher, who is teaching us math, is very patient. (Restrictive/Non-Restrictive)

Read the following passage and identify the relative clauses:

"The city, which is located on the coast, is a popular tourist destination. The hotel, where we stayed, was very comfortable. The staff, who were very friendly, made our stay very enjoyable."

Exercise 4: Writing with Relative Clauses

1. Write a short paragraph using at least two relative clauses to describe a person, place, or thing.

Relative clauses can also be used in speech to add variety and interest.

Example: "The city, which is located on the coast, is a popular tourist destination."

Exercise 5: Creating a Conversation with Relative Clauses

1. Create your own conversation using at least two relative clauses to describe a person, place, or thing.

Review the key points of relative clauses:

- Definition: A relative clause is a type of subordinate clause that provides more information about a person, place, or thing.
- Function: Relative clauses are introduced by a relative pronoun, such as who, which, or that.
- Usage: Relative clauses can be used to add variety and interest to writing and speech.

Exercise 6: Review Quiz

1. What is the function of a relative clause?
2. What is the difference between a restrictive and non-restrictive relative clause?
3. How can relative clauses be used in writing and speech?

Extension Activity

Create a short story using at least three relative clauses to describe a person, place, or thing.

Reflection

Reflect on what you have learned about relative clauses.

How can you use relative clauses to improve your writing and speaking skills?

Conclusion

Congratulations! You have completed the homework sheet on relative clauses.

Remember to practice using relative clauses in your writing and speech to improve your communication skills.