

Overview

This lesson plan is designed for students aged 14 to learn how to identify and use gerunds correctly in sentences, particularly with verbs like love and enjoy, in the context of discussing jobs and professions. The primary learning objective is for students to achieve at least 80% accuracy in using gerunds in job-related conversations.

Background Information

Gerunds are verb forms ending in -ing that function as nouns in a sentence. Understanding how to use gerunds, especially with verbs like love and enjoy, is crucial for effective communication in English, particularly when discussing preferences and interests related to jobs and professions.

Definition and Examples

Gerunds are formed by adding -ing to the base form of a verb. For example, the verb "love" becomes "loving" and the verb "enjoy" becomes "enjoying".
